The Need for CCOs

AFFARS CC-202 - Establishment of CCOs

- The CCO is the key individual providing support to contingency operations. Contracting activities shall review contingency taskings and designate a sufficient number of qualified individuals to perform these contingency taskings

- The CCO must have integrity, as they are American taxpayer

- So why are Contingency Contracting Officers so important? Let's ask Major General Edgington, SAF/ACQ ...

Security Considerations

U.S. AIR FORCE

■ OPSEC

- Cell phones are never secure - easy to eavesdrop
- Use local currency when ever possible
- OSI can help identify threats

■ COMSEC

- When discussing details with vendors, in the AOR or CONUS, do not disclose numbers of deployed personnel or future operations plans

■ COMPUSEC

- Unclassified email from a deployed location is not secure
- If you receive a requirement over the SIPRNET, you must force the requiring activity to provide an unclassified request
 - Avoid security compromise

Professional CCOs

“ The Air Force exists to fight and win wars -- that’s our core expertise. It’s what allows us to be called professional. The tools of our trade are lethal and we engage in operations that involve risk to human life and untold national treasures. Because of what we do, our standards must be higher than those of society at large. The American public earn the respect and trust of the American people because of the integrity we demonstrate.”
